Power Factor Correction (PFC)

Power factor is the ratio of real power (P) to the apparent or complex power (S) in an ac mains power distribution system. Unity power factor occurs when voltage and current are in phase and is the optimal load for the power distribution system. Common electronic products present reactive loads that are not in phase. These out-of-phase situations create an apparent power load to the distribution system that introduces inefficiencies and require increased power generation capacity and load carrying characteristics for the ac power distribution system. Power factor correction (PFC) is the technique used to minimize the effect of product loads that present a non unity power factor. For ease in determining if your product configuration includes a PFC power supply, check for the presence of the CE marking on the product regulatory label; the CE marking will appear only on products that have PFC power supplies.

The following countries are provided with Dell product containing PFC power supplies: Albania, Andorra, Anguilla, Aruba, Austria, Bassas da India (France), Belarus, Belgium, Bermuda, Bosnia & Herzegovina, Bouvet Island, British Indian Ocean Territory, British Virgin Islands, Bulgaria, Cambodia, Cayman Islands, China, Clipperton Island, Croatia, Cyprus, Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Europa Island, Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), Faroe Islands, Finland, France, French Guiana, French Polynesia, French Southern and Antarctic Lands, Gaza Strip, ⁵ The above-listed EMC certifications may vary depending upon the location of the Dell factory and specific product configuration. Certification marks may not be applied on products for countries outside the purchaser's country.

⁶ This indicates if the listed country/region will accept a non-PFC power supply. A "Y" indicates some or all the products delivered in that county/region may include a non-PFC supply. In those cases, any approvals that are listed as "N", indicating they require a PFC supply will not be applied to product purchased in non-PFC country/regions.

⁸ This indicates if the listed country/region will accept a non-PFC power supply. A "Y" indicates some or all the products delivered in that county/region may include a non-PFC supply.
